"Leave to print" speeches that were never delivered in Congress is fenrfully abused by fellows like Caleb Powers, who take advantage of it for private ends. For instance he replies to the speech of Judge Rubsion at Williamsburg and secures its sion at williamsburg and secures its publication in the Congressional Record. Then he has thousands upon thousands of it printed at the expense of the government and londs the overcrowded mails with it to his constituency under his frank, thereby making the government pay hundreds of dellars for what only constituency what only constituency is the second constituency of iteds of dollars for what anic con-cerns the pardoned assassin suspect. He accuses the judge of ignorance and says it incapacitates him from serving in Congress and then animadverts on the folly of putting new and untried men in the hulls of national legislation. Powers speaks of himself as an old and experienced member. but if he has done any thing to war-rant the large sdary he draws, the records do not show it. The 11th district is seriously handicapped by such a representative and it is pleasing to note that men like Charley Finley and other supporters of Powers are realizing the futility of keeping him in Congress and will join in ing him in Congress and will join in the effort to relegate him to the rear, where he should always have remained. He is a perfect figure head in Congress, without standing and without influence, and his people have paid dearly for gratifying a sentiment.

The reception given on Thursday afternoon by Miss Susnn Fisher Woods at her leautiful country afternoon by Miss Susnn Fisher Woods at her leautiful country home was a charming affair for Miss Woods' friends to meet her sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert H. Woods, Stanford's latest bride, who was formerly Miss M. Kay Sullee, of Harrodsburg. For the occusion the spucious home was decorated very artistically pink and white, cornations and smibink and while, operations and single has, being used in profusion and lighted by candle light. In the library, Mesdames Richard C. Hocker and Alfred L. Pence served ten and black cake. The levely hostess and bride, who received the puests, were beautiful gowned in pink evening dresses and the bride entried a corsage hou-quet of sweet peas and roses. Sweet strains of music were dispersed from the Victrola during the entire afternoon. The dining room, where are
